Just at this periodical conjuncture the Democrat is quite the familiest paper in the word. By the way, we notice that some ot our contemporaries are communing Bro. Bush for autagonizing the nominee of his party. Therein they do a good man great injustice. He can't help himself. He's bound to run for an office this year. His can lidacy in modicine prescribed for him by Dr. Jack Bemiss, who says his political system requires that sort of treatment every two or three years to relieve it of accumulated partisan bilious secretions. So, you see, he is simply running for his health's sake, and has no id a of being elected. Indeed, were he, by an untoward accident to triumph at the pulls, we are confident that his astonishment thereat would be sufficient to superinduce a stroke of apoplexy. So, brethren of the democratic press, let Bra. Bush have his tittle flug in peace: he can not injure himself, and will not jaopardize the chances of the regular nowince.
